Stockbridge, Georgia

Southern Crescent Medical Office Building presents a striking contemporary design statement, blending cast stone elements, elegant glass, and traditional masonry materials.

When Dr. Lawrence Gross set out to develop a premier office and surgery setting for Southern Crescent Plastic Surgery, he engaged The Hunter Group Architects to assist him with his project.

Dr. Gross was particularly interested in our experience with planning surgery centers, and our ability to analyze the feasibility, and control the project budget. He also asked that his building provide a dramatic design statement. Our services for his project were comprehensive - in addition to complete architectural and engineering services, we assisted Dr. Gross with the project financial analysis and with leasing medical office space to other practices.

The result of our collaboration with Dr. Gross is a striking, contemporary architectural solution. The medical office building provides space for both Dr. Gross' office practice and his outpatient surgery center. The building also houses suites for The Hughston Clinic, the widely recognized orthopaedics and sports medicine practice; Human Performance and Rehabilitative Center, a physical therapy unit that includes a special laboratory for orthotics and prosthetics, and The Doctors Office, an expanding Family Medicine practice.
