

COMMUNITY HEALTH CENTERS

*Biddle Point
Community Health Center
Charlotte, North Carolina*

As a result of The Hunter Group Architects' planning effort, Carolinas HealthCare System implemented a development program for facilities in both their private physician network and to serve their community health center program. Based on the original programming, directed to different community areas, different sites, and varying physician practice models, this premier hospital system was able to apply a consistent planning system to their primary care facilities, and obtain a high level of return from value engineering across building systems for multiple projects.

This planning approach still allowed for individual architectural character for each project, to respond to each site and community setting.
